

An Edmonton NEWS LETTER

By T. B. WINDROSS

EDMONTON. (Press' Gallery) — Much to the relief of everybody, the debate, if it may be called a debate, on the reply to the speech from the three opposition members. It was a very one-sided discussion. There were two members of the opposition took any part. These two were Mr. R. Howson, K.C., and John Irwin, member for Calgary and Conservative.

Mr. Irwin rose to his feet to let the house know that the opposition's attitude in the legislature is very small "the Conservative party is not dead and buried."

The debate lasted for nine days and thirty members took part in it. It was nine days' duration on the principles and details of the Credit Only bank busters on the government side alone, but without exception they were all practiced and fluent platform speakers. The opposition, however, let them in their courteous silence. Let us hope the throne speech debate lasted 12 days and 30 speakers took part, the same number that took part this year.

This week promises to be very interesting in the legislature, if any persons from outside towns are planning to come up to the capital to hear some of the sessions the discussion this week should be a good time to come.

It has been indicated that Premier Aberhart's new education bill will have to be introduced, and the Social Credit by-call will be brought down. Advance information obtained in government circles predicts that this bill will be an instrument that will not have to be introduced.

The possibility of a recall being successful will be limited to some extent by making the percentage of electors demanding it before proceedings can be taken sufficiently large to prevent the law from being unconstitutional.

There will be no opening or recall proceedings on frivolous or minor reasons.

There is also a possibility that the bill for the recall that the government established Social Credit will be brought down late in the week, as it is said in official circles to ready for introduction. These three bills are the most important and possibly the most controversial bills to come before the session of the legislature.

There is much curiosity regarding the details of the Social Credit measure, but these are being kept a close secret by the government until the day when they will be revealed in the house.

The legislature adjourned Thursday for the funeral of the late Mr. Justice Boyle, which was held from First Presbyterian church and attended by Premier Aberhart, members of the cabinet and a large number of members. A minute of sympathy with the late judge's family was passed by the house, leaders in all parties paying tribute to the late judge.

Introduced by Hon. W. N. Chant, minister of agriculture, a bill was passed Friday authorizing expenditures on relief for farmers who have suffered for want of feed during the recent severe weather. And another act to assist the guardianship of loans for relief of farmers by the Dominion Financial Loan company, was passed. There was some discussion over amendments to the Drilling for Water act, and the Sod-ennanization of Marriages act, but throughout it the members were all in good humor.

The order paper for this week will contain only several things on several days.

Opposition members have asked for returns that have opened up fields of opportunity. The financial returns tabled showed that the tentative budget provided for the government about two months ago contained proposals for boosting the income tax heavily. Mr. Howson is going to ask that both Major C. H. Douglas and Mr. R. Howson appear before the legislature at the same time.

He will include in his motion that it should be found impossible for both these experts to present now, the session should adjourn to a later date so that he may hear them.

There is no guarantee, however, that the government will agree to Mr. Howson's proposal, but if they did the sitting at which these advisors to the government meet should be a very interesting one. Mr. Howson points out that Daniels and Magor are advancing the cause from opposite positions and that they appear to be at cross purposes.

The interim report of the provincial auditor, tabled in the house reveals some startling facts. A deficit for the first year, ending March 31, 1936, on ordinary account is estimated (Continued on Page 4)

Local Mixed Bonspiel Advances To Semi-finals In Major Events

Semi-finals to be Played this Afternoon—Twenty Rinks Take Part in Two Major Events—Enthusiasm and Interest Shown

Keith only Undefeated Rink to Date.

The annual local mixed bonspiel of the Bassano Curling club is now nearing its final stage. The Grand Challenge and the Merchants events, Keith, Young, Beecher and Rodman are slated to play in the semi-finals of the Grand Challenge this afternoon; only two rinks have advanced into the semi-finals of the Merchants as such.

Twenty rink, including many students and ladies in their team, have entered into the bonspiel this year.

Despite the cold weather, particularly the beginning of the week, the schedule has not been delayed. Draws are played each evening under the direction of the draw-secretary, Roy Gayford, so as not to interfere with school and business hours. Though draws were as nearly equal as possible in strength, some unseeded sides have been regressed, but many other closely fought games have bolstered up the average. It is impossible to give a detailed account of any particular game, but some exciting and interesting contests have been witnessed and spectators are expected to draw many spectators.

With the exception of prizes for the consolation being donated by J. Slorance, L. Jackson and Roy Smith (first prize) and N. E. Hinton (second prize), all prizes were purchased by the members. The draw for the Grand Challenge are four black clocks and four pen and pencil sets. First prize in the Merchants is two packs of playing cards with score pad and pen and two sets of men's golf clubs. Second prize is four men's shirts with a $10 value in them. In the consolation, is four 2-pound boxes of chocolates and second prize is four fountain pen lighters.

Much satisfaction was expressed by the shareholders at the standing of the a.s.n., as the district produced a very light crop in 1935. C. F. Armstrong praised as chair.

With the finals of the consolation expected to be played in a couple of days, the local bonspiel again nears the close of a very successful curling fest.

Gem

GEM. Feb. 25.—A very successful meeting of the Excelonians was held on Saturday night with 23 members present. Plans for a district winter festival were discussed but, owing to the uncertainty of the weather and roads, no definite date was set. The next meeting will be held a week from Saturday.

A. P. Miller had to go to Bassano on Saturday morning to see the doctor about an infected hand and had to remain at the hospital for a few days and returned home on Monday.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. E. Seifridge on the birth of a son on Sunday, February 23.

Bob Williamson returned home on Saturday after a two weeks' trip to Canada. He had a varied and eventful trip.

Mrs. Archibald returned home on Friday after a month's visit in Medicine Hat. Condolence and sympathy.

The community can announce presentation of the play "Dionne Ducks," at the Gem school on Friday, March 12. The club is also trying to make arrangements for presenting the play at other points in the vicinity.

Mrs. Myrtle Pollock, who has been visiting in Gem since Christmas, returned to Calgary on Wednesday.

May God reward our saying on this page the things that merely please. We would be humble in our opinions; we would be circumspect of the opinions of others; but we would not be afraid of the immutable laws of cause and effect, for therein lies the wisdom of the ages.

THE RELIEF PROBLEM

In the past five years over four million dollars have been spent on relief in Alberta. This huge contribution has been provided from funds advanced by the federal and provincial governments, augmented by advances from municipal governments.

A continuation of this great expenditure for many more years will invite general bankruptcy, and still unemployed people cannot be left to their own resources.

The problem is one of the most baffling that has yet been experienced and a solution is not yet in sight.

The one hope is that farm prices will rise, furnishing a basis for a general business increase, a livening of employment, and a general recovery.

This relief problem will probably take years to solve satisfactorily. It is a relic of the depression that cannot be evaded.

AGAIN—THE WAR DEBTS

Edouard Herriot, embattled old French politician who also took his turn at the premiership of that volatile country, got a neat one back on opponents in parliament the other day.

A representative was criticizing the Franco-Soviet treaty, saying that Russia had dishonored huge debts owing to France.

Herriot arose and said the Soviet nation was not alone in that respect, and that in fact France, herself, had dishonored her obligations to the United States, against his service.

Which of course was quite true.

And it is also true that Great Britain failed to honor her war debts to the United States.

There is, however, another side to the war debts question. United States demanded payment in gold. That was in the bond. But the debtor countries could not possibly obtain sufficient gold for the purpose.

Had the United States accepted goods and services for the huge war debts the bulk of them would have been paid.

And the depression would not have been nearly as severe, for millions of men would have been occupied in making goods and rendering services to the great creditor of North America.

The Windsor Star supposes that it would be news if a man bit Jack Frost.

ABOUT THE WEATHER

The forces that cause climatic conditions in various parts of the earth are under constant scrutiny by scientists who seek to unravel the secrets of the weather changes.

There will come a time when probably when people will know in advance what to expect in the way of weather. But right now we are far distant from that state of affairs and have to depend, as does The Hama Herald, on the Rocky Mountain squirrels and the Indians.

Commander Richard Byrd, the Antarctic explorer, and other trained observers who have made scientific observations in that faraway part of the globe, note a correlation between the weather in Antarctica and the west coast of South America. In fact they have fairly well mapped the relationship.

The cold Humboldt current which sweeps northward along the west coast of South America make a desert of much of the coastal region. On the other hand the Japanese current, coming eastward from the orient, make the Pacific coast of Canada and the United States a pleasant and fertile land.

Much of the British Isles are further north than Alberta but the Gulf Stream, circling eastward from off the Labrador coast, carries with it warmth and moderation to the British climate.

The present winter in Alberta has been the coldest in a stretch of some thirty years. Had we known what was ahead of us most people would have been better prepared for the bitter blasts and sub-zero weather.

Mark Twain once said that everybody talked about the weather but no one did anything about it. The time is coming when the scientists will do something about it by telling us what to expect. Then some unburdened Marconi, or Edison, or Steinmetz will learn how to furnish cheap heat by exploding the atom, or some similar discovery, and the blustering blasts of stormy boreas will be conquered.

WHEAT TRADE PROSPECTS

Inklings of bad weather in Europe with the probable effect of lessening wheat production there is arousing interest in grain markets all over the world. If Europe has a poor crop this year trade may be revived on a wide scale.

Europe has been lucky for some years past in having large crops of excellent quality wheat. The weather has much to do with the result of the European crops, just the same as here and elsewhere, but European wheat is largely of the winter variety, while ours is pretty much spring wheat.

Should the damage not be as severe as indicated and should Europe harvest another large crop the result will be a continuation of the small and draggy international trade in wheat.

PROSPECTIVE INFLATION

On every hand there is talk of monetary inflation. The high, the low, the rich and the poor—all have been inculcated with the same germ.

The odd feature is that this very unanimity of opinion is quite likely to add a forcible impetus to the prospective monetary or credit expansion.

Apart from that there is the pressure of the increased price of gold and the greatly increased production of gold throughout the world.

The general price level, according to Dr. Edwin Walter Kemmerer, should soon be twice as high as it was in the early part of 1933.

Dr. Kemmerer is known in North America and abroad as "the money doctor of the world." He has taken a leading part in reorganizing the money systems of thirteen countries on five continents.

He is now professor of International Finance at Princeton University, and is recognized as one of the world's leading authorities on money.

Herbert Hoover, ex-president of the United States, on the board of governors of Stanford University, voices that board's desire to sell out the twelve million in bonds it owns and buy common stocks. Mr. Hoover says the bonds are likely to lose value and the value of common stocks increase.

All of which is good "bull" news for the speculators. But people should realize that nobody can look into the future and nothing can be taken for granted.

Let this winter be a warning to all weather prophets to keep off the air and out of the newspapers. This suggestion is offered not only to aged Indians, bears, groundhogs, but to all and sundry.

THE ART OF LIVING

What the addition of radio has meant to the education, enlightenment, entertainment and general enjoyment of the people who live on Alberta farms would be better realized if the mysterious power of transmitting the human voice and other sounds through the air was suddenly lost.

The aerial connection with the uttermost parts of the earth, with the great centers of culture and learning, of the arts and sciences, is now part of our life. It is commonplace now, yet not many years ago it was a novelty little known and used by the great mass of the people.

Up until a dozen years ago newspapers, periodicals and books were the mainstay of those who sought to improve their minds and enlarge their vision. Reading will always play a large part in educating, informing and amusing people, but radio furnishes a thrilling ing accessory.

With the resources of a world's education readily available to almost everybody there is little excuse for the perpetuation of narrowness and ignorance.

"How can you live in Goshen?" said a friend from far away.

"This wretched country town
Where folks talk little things all year,
And plant their cabbage by the moon!"

Said I: "I do not live in Goshen—I eat here, sleep here, work here; I LIVE in Greece, where Plato taught And Phidias carved, and Epictetus wrote. I dwell in Rome, where Michelangelo wrought

In color, form and mass;
Where Cicero penned immortal lines,
And Dante sang undying songs.
Think not my life is small—
Because you see a little place.
I have my books, I have my dreams,
A thousand souls have left for me
Enchantment that transcends both time and place.

And so I live in Paradise. Not here."

Ten Minutes with the Scotch Philosopher

A neighbor is responsible for this tale of a Colle's maternal intellect.

At the end of December, she gave birth to a litter of puppies in the cow shed.

When the youngsters were able to crawl around, the mother would go to the house for the after-dinner service. This continued until a visitor took a fancy to one and put it in his car.

Thereafter Colle came to eat alone.

Later on a neighbor boy went to the shed and possessed himself of another.

This proved too much for the mother dog and she promptly moved the rest to a far-off straw pile.

All those who had the pleasure of listening to J. I. McFarland's speech on February 13 must have felt that the wisdom of our ruling statesmen is of the non-sensical type.

Explaining how inflation was about 30 per cent, he said his audience what had often been guessed at.

It was largely because great foreign milling interests were hostile to the men and his policy.

And the dismal J. I. McFarland speech then his audience led to those highly prosperous rents being rendered exceedingly happy again.

Doubting Thomases will find evidence of this in the low prices now prevailing in the wheat market.

Not long ago the neighbor met a fellow who used to farm on a large scale. In the days before the financial crackup it was nothing unusual for him to market a hundred thousand dollars' worth of wheat.

Cows were regarded as a nuisance and all the milk used in his home was given away. When he sold his farm, in hard times, however, he changed his ideas, and when we last saw him it was he was reducing over a three-dollar cream cheque.

He was still, his rather haughty ways had departed, leaving him a very modest and pleasant gentleman.

According to the promoters, the Olympic games were revived with the object of furthering the cause of international goodwill.

Understandably, this leaves them hard pressed to find a great stadium.

During one of their matches, the English box-kites were so wildly batted by the great crowd of spectators that the official announcer had to ask for more decent behavior. Perhaps that is why more decent behavior.

During the war, the English box-kites were married these international sports occurred in London a few years before the outbreak of the world war, in the final of the quarter mile, three Americans and one lone Scot, Lieutenant Hawself, were the competitors.

Although Hawself was considered the fastest man in the world at that distance, by being pocketed at the start he never had a chance of winning.

Hawself made no protest, but the judges declared he had been fouled and ordered the race to be run over again.

Accepting this decision as a reflection on their sportsmanship, the Americans refused to consider the matter.

But the war marathon arrived, bringing in its train a number of startling events.

Dorando, an Italian, was the first to reach the stadium where the race ended. As the great audience waited to cheer him, he was sent to failure.

Then, within a short distance of the judges' box, he fell to the ground utterly exhausted.

Without thinking of the consequences, two great attendants lifted him up and carried him to the infirmary. Close behind came the tall Irish-American, Johnny Hayes, and, since the rules of the marathon had been violated he was the rightful winner.

But it took hours of fierce wrangling to convince the authorities of this.

Many Americans left London vowing they would never return.

On the other hand, Italians everywhere maintained that Dorando had been swindled out of the trophy.

But the fortunate athlete did not return to his native land. Instead he remained in admiration of his highly courageous effort, London sportsmen presented him with a magnificent loving cup.

In the fall of the same year, the writer witnessed a ten-mile race between Dorando, Tom Longboat and the marvelous English runner, Alfie Shrub.

The last named was an easy winner.

Anthony Eden . . . of England

A Viennese Portrait in Vignette of that Young Englishman

(Translated from Neue Freie Presse (Vienna)

But just as he is for an idle spectator, he is not a man of much gait. He falls into a rage when one calls him that. He loves peace as he loves the picture of Mona Lisa, which he has so often admired at the Louvre, and he loves Arabic poems because they are beautiful harmonious things which he could understand.

But he will not abandon this peace to its own resources. He wants to work for it and, if necessary, fight for it. He wants peace not only between nations, within his country. He believes that workers should be assured the fruits of their labor. One of his favorite sayings is that unless every worker is a capitalist, it is no wonder that he becomes an enemy of capitalism.

This conception is common to the young Conservatives of England, and it is gaining ground, for the workers have long regarded themselves as stockholders in the British Empire, as members of a great association. The trade unions are less inclined to fight the big industrialists than to defend the interests of some of the stockholders in the state when they feel that those interests are affected.

Those who know Eden do not detect in him any overweening ambition or any desire to occupy a conspicuous post as leader. He is not consumed by any eternal flame. He does not devote all his activities to politics.

To him politics are the fulfillment of a duty that he has laid upon himself, and he recognizes that the upper classes can hold their position only if they render unto the king what is the king's and also render unto the church what is the church's.

He still speaks French and quoted the Koran when he met the English ambassador at dinner.

In 1924 he took his place among the Conservative benches in the House of Commons. From January, 1925, he became the Blackpool Member for Fylde.

The poet that the English parliamentarians seem to have forgotten has been reading all the time.

He still speaks French and quoted the Koran when he met the English ambassador at dinner.

The poet that the English parliamentarians seem to have forgotten has been reading all the time.

He still speaks French and quoted the Koran when he met the English ambassador at dinner.

In France they call him the best-dressed Englishman, but in England he is known as the most accomplished conversationalist. And, if he is not fond of the week-end flying to Paris, Berlin or Moscow, he plays tennis at the Ranelagh club.

His life represents the compromise that a modern Englishman of the upper social classes has made between the ideal of the nobility that existed before the war and the popular idea of our time.

He is convinced that, if Eden achieves this synthesis, he will take the side of the underworld whenever the state finds itself in a blind alley, for his sense of justice will regard that as the fairest solution.

He is known in London as a well-balanced gentleman, and anyone who has met him personally will grant that this description fits.

Fashionable Housewives

It wasn't ever thus but it now has become fashionable to buy at home. The reason is that years of "tight" money have made housewives think. As a result it has become unfashionable to order a far-away "bargain". It now is fashionable to accelerate the flow of home profit.

Fashionable housewives now buy at fair prices in Bassano.

There was a day when housewives bought the far-away "bargain" in the belief that it was good business to save a few pennies. But experience taught them a thing or two. Today's housewives do not buy blindly. They examine the article first and when satisfied with the product they pay a fair price at home. It is economical to make your purchases in Bassano.

SCOUTING . . .What It Is and DoesLetter from Chief Scout
(Sir Robert Baden-Powell)

Our aim is individual efficiency for the better service of others—that is true citizenship. It is brought about by the personal example of the Scoutmaster, and by encouraging the boy to develop, through activities which appeal to him, the attributes of Character, Health, Handicraft and Service for others.

The man or woman who takes a hand in this will find, as life grows shorter and things get into perspective, that that is the only thing that is really worth while, that really matters.

It does a great good for the youngster, a greater good for the country, and, incidentally, the greatest good mankind can have. Charlie Chaplin, when the comedian heard about it he immediately entered the contest, imitated himself—and came in second.

LIGHTER VEINBeaten at His Own Game

A western town some years ago had a Chamber of Commerce contest. Prizes were to be given to those who could imitate Charlie Chaplin. When the comedian heard about it he immediately entered the contest, imitated himself—and came in second.

Little by Little
An emigrant was preparing to leave his native land to try his luck abroad.

An acquaintance inquired casually:

"What are you going to do when you arrive in Canada?"

"Oh, take up land."

"Much?"

"Only a shovelful at a time."

Believe It or Not

Sitting in the press box of a Baltimore stadium during a football game, Mrs. M. Hopkins, Roland Park, Md., suddenly remembered she had an important letter in her pocket unmailed.

Just at that time a well groomed man was preparing to leave the game.

"Won't you be enough to mail this letter for me?" Mrs. Hopkins asked of the man who looked honest enough to be trusted with her letter. The stranger very graciously accepted the letter and promised to mail it post haste.

It was Postmaster General James A. Farley she had selected out of 64,998 persons at the football game to mail her letter.

Correct Either Way

Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, told this one to the Boston Chamber of Commerce:

The late Will Rogers was invited to speak before a large audience. The speaker of the assembly was suffering from the most severe depression in its history—when the chairman arose and said, "Pardon me, Mr. Rogers, but we do not permit the use of the word 'depression' in this club," and Will said, "All right, Mr. Chairman; as I was saying, this country is enjoying the greatest midwest boom in its history."

Mr. Gay also told this one:

"Many of you must feel that economics are the fellow up about classical music. Well, I am a fanatical fan of a fudge was he and said that a fudge was a complicated musical performance in which the theme kept coming in and the audience kept going out."

G. M. Stewart, district inspector of the dominion seed branch, Calgary, has stated that Alberta is in a worse position, insofar as pure seed is concerned than any other province at any time during the last 25 years.

Wheat Party Postponed

The gathering of those interested in wheat in Canada, originally slated for Winnipeg on February 25, has been postponed indefinitely. W. D. Eulau, minister of trade and commerce, who was to preside at the postponement, said that events transpiring at Ottawa made this more necessary.

The assembling of representatives of wheat growers, grain and elevator companies, flour milling corporations and individuals interested in the problem of the surplus production of wheat in Canada, was to be held at the University of Manitoba, Feb. 25.

European Crop Conditions

The European continent has been remarkably lucky in the way of having favorable weather for grain crops during the past few years. This has resulted in large yields of good quality grain during the past four years, however, which has not been as immediate as in the immediate past years. The greater part of Europe experienced an open winter with mild weather and frequent snowfall. Late in the year, however, there was a cold wave which swept most of the continent. This suggests crop damage as mild weather usually brings the grain to a cold state where it is susceptible to a cold

Canadian Flour in U.S.A.

United States millers are complaining of cheap imports of flour at border points. In one North Dakota town the Lake of the Woods Milling Company of Canada offered a 98-lb sack of its Five Roses brand at $2.85 while the same size of flour in the United States was selling at $4.00 to $4.75. Since the AAA was declared ultra vires flour has come down in price but it still remains at a price a dollar dearer for a 98-lb sack than Canadian price.

Oats and Barley

British farmers obtain 72 per cent of their income from livestock, 2.15 per cent from wheat, 6.13 per cent from all grains, 3.25 per cent from sugar beet and the remainder from market garden produce, hops, hay and straw.

Although Canada has a relatively small non-agricultural population, the absorption of surplus production in Canada is increasing in Canada, with the remaining 15 per cent finding markets abroad.

Millers, bakers, packers and other processors in the United States have some $180 million collected from grain import taxes this year. They are not sure whether to return it to the products or give it to the government and may decide that the better way, after all, is to keep it themselves.
